We always do the right thing.

At Haleon we have a powerful purpose:
To deliver better everyday health with humanity.
Nothing is more important than our health
and the health of the people we love.
What we do matters.
So does how we do it.
That's why we have our
Code of Conduct.

What we do matters.

So does how we do it.

At Haleon we are dedicated to our hundreds of millions of consumers around the world. They trust our brands and depend on our products every day. We need to give them the reassurance of knowing that we're totally committed to their health.

That is why we must always do the right thing. It means holding our actions and decisions to the highest possible standards. It means never compromising what we stand for. And it means protecting our consumers, our customers, our company and each other.

This is the responsibility of everyone at Haleon, and it's why our Code of Conduct is so important. It guides our decisions, reminds us of our culture, and supports us when we need to speak up.

I strongly encourage you to read our new Code of Conduct. Take time to understand what it means for you, and return to it when you need guidance. It's here to help all of us do the right thing, always.

We live by our Code.
All of us, every day.

We live by our Code. continued.

Why our Code is essential

At Haleon we operate in a highly competitive environment. Our challenges grow, every day. Everything we do can potentially put our reputation at risk. We all have a responsibility to uphold the standards that we've set to protect our business. Our Code clearly sets out our culture and ethical principles. It's here to help us create a culture of always doing the right thing.

It's here for everyone

Our Code applies to everyone at Haleon, across every location, and in every role and level of seniority. From colleagues and team leaders, to our Haleon Leadership Team and Board Members, we are all responsible for living by our Code and being role models. Our suppliers, distributors, agents, consultants and contractors are also subject to many of the principles of our Code. Together, we must create a safe environment where our Code and applicable written standards are respected, and everyone feels comfortable to raise any concerns we might have.

Putting principles into practice

Within the Code, we explain the principles that underpin our ethical standards. It's important to note that our Code does not replace reading our related policies, undertaking mandatory training or using our guidance materials.

Where to get further guidance

Our Code is extensive, but it does not cover every situation. When each of us is faced with a difficult decision, we must also consider what we believe is the right thing to do - for our consumers, customers, colleagues and company. If you have any questions about the principles and how they apply to real-life situations, my team of Ethics & Compliance Business Partners is always available to advise you.

If you become aware of misconduct, talk to us or use the Speak Up line. In doing so, you'll be helping protect our people, our consumers and our reputation.

Understanding misconduct

Failing to comply with our Code of Conduct is deemed to be misconduct and is treated very seriously at Haleon. It may result in disciplinary action, up to and including dismissal. It could also include financial clawback for significant misconduct.

Thank you for reading and following our Code, and for helping make sure Haleon is the company that always does the right thing.

Our culture and behaviours. The heart of our business.

Our culture helps us deliver our purpose and strategy. It's driven by our behaviours. Our Code helps us shape the decisions we have to make and the actions we choose to take. Together, they make sure that at Haleon we always do the right thing.

Visit our Culture and Behaviours page here

Do the right thing. Our decision tree.

Our written standards help us address the different risks we may face. But it's not possible to cover every decision or action you might need to take. In these instances, use your best judgement, be guided by our ethical approach and ask for advice if needed.

Step up and Speak Up.

Everyone has a duty to Speak Up

At Haleon, we always do the right thing. However, there may be rare occasions when an employee or third party intentionally or unintentionally acts in a way that is not in line with our Code of Conduct Principles and our culture, our policies or the law. We are all responsible for speaking up, if we have a concern or reason to suspect that this has occurred.

It can feel hard to speak up and raise a concern. But always remember that by not reporting suspected misconduct, you're allowing inappropriate behaviour and actions to continue. This may harm our colleagues, our consumers, our company and our culture. In some cases, it may also lead to significant financial losses and serious reputational damage for Haleon.

We always act on Speak Ups

All concerns raised will be reviewed in detail by colleagues in Ethics & Compliance, Legal and/or HR, and, if appropriate, a formal investigation may take place. We will ensure that your concern is addressed in the appropriate way. We may ask you to provide further information to enable us to fully investigate your concern. You should treat any information about the investigation as confidential. As the person who reported the concern, we will give you feedback at the end of the process, even if we are unable to share the outcome in detail for confidentiality or other reasons.

You should always give voice to your concerns.
That's how we keep getting better.

Step up and Speak Up. continued.

Sometimes concerns may be raised that turn out to be unfounded. This should not discourage you from speaking up; it is always better to raise your concern, as long as the information you share is provided in good faith.

Retaliation will not be tolerated

We do not tolerate retaliation against those who raise concerns at Haleon. All concerns raised are treated in strict confidence. Although you can speak up anonymously if you prefer, we encourage you to identify yourself to help us address your concern effectively. The more detail you can provide about your concern, the faster we can review it and make sure the necessary stakeholders are empowered to resolve it.

We operate a zero tolerance policy towards behaviour which could be perceived as retaliation or harassment of any employee who raises concerns in good faith. Good faith reporting means that you have a genuinely held concern and you believe the information you are providing is accurate and truthful. A concern can be raised in good faith even if it turns out you were mistaken about the facts. However, anyone who reports a concern is not automatically immune from disciplinary action if they are involved in misconduct or make false allegations maliciously.

If you become aware of misconduct, you must speak up. By doing so, you'll be helping to protect our people, our consumers and our reputation.

Need to Speak Up? Here's how to do it...

You should report your concerns directly to your line manager or a member of your local management team in the first instance. Alternatively, if you feel uncomfortable speaking up to your line manager or local management team, you may report your concerns to Ethics & Compliance, HR or Legal.

You can also use the Speak Up channels via telephone, web portal, email or mail. These channels are managed independently of Haleon and are available globally in multiple languages.

Always remember that by speaking up and raising concerns, you are doing the right thing.

Our Company & Colleagues:

Careful Communication.

Our Principle

We make sure all communications about our business interests are timely, accurate and respectful. They must reflect our behaviours, and follow our policies, approval procedures and all applicable laws.

Examples

- We should be aware that our personal views on social media could be attributed to Haleon. Even when engaging in a non-work capacity, it is easy to identify individuals as Haleon staff. So we use our judgement on what is acceptable to post.
- We are careful when expressing opinions about political, religious or socially sensitive topics.

Why it matters

The way we communicate with each other and with the world is crucial to building trust in our brands and maintaining our reputation.

What we expect

We are careful when sending electronic messages or leaving voicemails, just as we are when sending a letter or memorandum. To prevent risks to the company, we are similarly cautious when interacting on social media. We always remember that anything we write may be misinterpreted. We never write anything that we wouldn't be comfortable reading later in a newspaper or on social media.

Our Policies & Guidance

Our Company & Colleagues:

Conflicts of Interest.

Our Principle

We act with fairness and transparency when facing a conflict of interest. We make sure our ability to perform our duties is not influenced by, or in conflict with, our personal relationships or any actual or anticipated benefit. A conflict of interest arises when personal activities, interests or relationships interfere or appear to interfere with our professional judgement, decisions or actions. Even in circumstances where we do not receive personal benefit, the appearance of a conflict of interest may negatively impact our credibility or that of our company.

Examples [of potential conflicts of interest]

- Doing business between Haleon and a family member, friend or business in which you or a family member or friend has any interest or benefit.
- Personal relationships at work with the potential to improperly influence sound decision-making.
- Romantic relationships at work where there is an imbalance of power, e.g. with direct reports.
- Outside employment or political activities on your own time, if this work or activity is connected to or affects our business.

Why it matters

Conflicts of interest can undermine our culture, so it's important to disclose any actual, potential or apparent conflicts of interest. This allows others to evaluate the matter and help us do the right thing, rather than keeping quiet and potentially creating a difficult ethical or legal situation. This helps maintain the trust and confidence of all our stakeholders and ensures that every decision is taken in the best interests of Haleon.

What we expect

If any relationships or interests arise that could conflict or appear to conflict with the performance of our duties for Haleon, we must proactively notify our line manager and upload it into Workday. Each situation must be evaluated individually. We always keep in mind that potential conflicts can usually be resolved through open discussion and transparency with line managers, HR and Ethics & Compliance. Remember that a conflict of interest is not necessarily a Code of Conduct violation, but not disclosing it is.

Our Company & Colleagues:

Data Use.

Our Principle

We responsibly handle all data entrusted to us. We commit ourselves and our service providers to comply with our Data Privacy and Data Security principles, as well as local data protection regulations.

Examples

- Process data lawfully and transparently.
- Collect data for specific instances and for explicit and legitimate purposes only.
- Ensure the security of personal data and respect storage period and deletion policies.

Why it matters

The responsible use, storage and protection of data and personal data ensures that we comply with applicable laws and maintain the trust of our stakeholders. It is also a valuable asset for our business, helping us innovate and operate in an increasingly digital and data-driven world.

What we expect

We safeguard important data from corruption, compromise or loss. And we secure the privacy, availability and integrity of the data available to us. We delete data we do not need in line with our data retention policies.

Our Company & Colleagues:

Diversity, Equity and Inclusion.

Our Principle

We always show respect for our colleagues and the communities around us. At Haleon it's crucially important that we offer equal opportunities for every employee, and create a fair work environment where everyone can thrive and be inspired to do their best work.

Examples

→ We do not tolerate any kind of discriminatory behaviour based on race, colour, language, caste, nationality or social origin, indigenous status, religion, disability, gender, marital status, sex, sexual orientation, union membership, political opinion, pregnancy, veteran status, age, or any other characteristics protected by law.

Why it matters

Diversity, equity and inclusion are the essential foundations that support our commitment to human rights and humanity. By leveraging our diversity, we're better able to develop new ideas, innovate, understand our markets, stakeholders and consumers, and drive our successful and competitive workforce.

What we expect

We create a respectful and supportive environment in which we listen to others and respect everyone's opinions. We do not tolerate violence, harassment, threatening or otherwise inappropriate behaviour of any kind. This also applies to any form of sexual harassment. Every Haleon employee, and all supply chain and business relationships, must ensure an equitable and inclusive culture that is free from discrimination.

| We conduct our business activities in full compliance with the competition laws of the countries in which we operate. It is not permitted to provide to or receive from competitors non-public information regarding pricing, costs, product supply, strategies, customers, marketing plans or other sensitive information, including through third parties. It is also prohibited to use our market position to gain unfair advantage over competitors. | Fair competition is fundamental to the free market. Competition promotes innovation, keeps prices fair, and maintains the quality and choice of products and services. It benefits consumers and customers, as well as our business. | We follow the guidance and comply with the requirements and principles of the Competition Law Policy. Our Company & Colleagues:

Financial Integrity.

Our Principle

The financial information that we maintain internally or provide to shareholders, regulators and other stakeholders, must be accurate, complete and timely.

Examples

- Do not conceal, falsify or modify records to mislead or influence users of financial information.
- Do not delay or accelerate the recording of revenue or expenses between reporting periods.
- Do not operate outside the limits of your delegated authority.
- Do not process transactions, such as buying, selling or transferring goods/assets, without the appropriate authorisation.
- Do not authorise or fund any transaction that is undisclosed or unrecorded in our books, records and accounts.
- Do not approve or make any payment that you understand may be used for anything other than what is described in supporting documents.
- Do not process or deal with any funds where you have any knowledge or suspicion that they may relate to wrongful activity.

Why it matters

The integrity of our financial information is essential. It supports sound business decisions and enables us to comply with our commercial, legal and regulatory obligations. And it meets our stakeholders' expectations of Haleon as a reliable and trustworthy partner.

What we expect

All our financial information must be supported by appropriate processes, procedures and controls. This ensures that underlying transactions are appropriately authorised, accurately recorded and supported by auditable records. When committing the company to expenditure, we must follow the Grant of Authority standard and relevant procurement procedures.

Our Company & Colleagues:

Gifts, Hospitality and Entertainment.

Our Principle

We always carefully consider whether it is appropriate to give and accept gifts, hospitality or entertainment.

Examples

- Giving a gift to a government official after a business meeting is not permitted in any circumstances, even if this is a cultural practice of that country.
- It is not appropriate to receive a ticket from a third party for an event, without a business purpose.
- It is not appropriate to give a luxury gift to an HCP speaker after a successful lecture at conferences or events.
- When permitted by local laws, it is acceptable to give a box of chocolates with modest value to celebrate the successful completion of a project supported by the third party under a formal agreement.

Why it matters

In some situations, giving or receiving gifts or hospitality may be misunderstood or perceived as undue influence or a bribe.

What we expect

We never promise, offer or give gifts, hospitality or entertainment with the intention of obtaining or retaining business, securing improper business advantage, or causing the recipient to do anything that favours Haleon. We do not give or receive gifts from government officials or their family members. This covers every circumstance, including cultural acknowledgement purposes. Protecting our Company Assets.

Our Principle

We take responsibility for our physical and intangible corporate assets.

Examples

- Physical assets include items such as money, products, vehicles, mobile devices, laptops and tablets. Examples of intangible assets include employee time and intellectual property.
- It is a Code violation to use a corporate laptop to run a family business, or use corporate fuel cards for a personal vehicle.

Why it matters

Having appropriate assets and access to the right information is key to achieving our purpose. We need to safeguard our property, and the information of our consumers and customers.

What we expect

We ensure that Haleon's property is only used for proper business or management approved purposes, and we protect our assets against damage or misuse. We only use confidential information for its intended purpose as part of our duties, and we protect it at all times.

Our Principles. continued.

Our World:

Human Rights.

Our Principle

We make it a priority to respect, support and uphold human rights, both at Haleon and wherever we do business.

Examples

→ We seek to ensure there is no child labour, no harmful or inhuman treatment and no forced labour or human trafficking. We further seek to ensure that there is safe and decent work for young workers, fair working hours, remuneration and employment conditions, and that we conduct business with integrity.

Why it matters

Human rights are the basic standards that all people are entitled to in order to live with dignity. They include the right to health, privacy, education and the protection of children. We respect human rights in our endeavours and recognise the possible consequences for failing to do so, including reputational damage and loss of trust of our stakeholders. By failing to do so, we risk significant fines, reputational damage, loss of consumer trust and low investor preference.

What we expect

We are committed to becoming a role model in respecting human rights in our work environment. We encourage people to speak up if they identify abuse or have concerns. We strive to prevent, mitigate and remediate adverse impacts that our business activities or business relationships may have on the human rights of everyone associated with Haleon. Anti-Bribery and Corruption (ABAC).

Our Principle

We have zero tolerance of all forms of corruption. We are committed to acting with honesty, transparency and integrity in all our business dealings, and upholding all relevant laws and regulations (e.g. U.S. Foreign Corrupt Practices Act/UK Bribery Act). Corruption includes, but is not limited to, bribery, money laundering, fraud, and tax evasion.

Examples

→ Bribery and corruption can include, but are not limited to, cash payments, bank transfers, holidays disguised as business trips, facilitation payments, commissions, gifts, event tickets, job opportunities, donations, hospitality, discounts, memberships without a clear business purpose, political contributions, lobbying abuse, nepotism, undeclared conflicts of interest, misreporting of travel expenses, disproportional payments to a third party, or preferential terms.

Why it matters

Our ABAC Policy is designed to ensure that we uphold the highest standards of professional integrity and trust. ABAC violations can lead to large fines and significant reputational impact, and may lead to Haleon losing its operating license.

What we expect

We do not directly or indirectly promise, offer, authorise, solicit, or accept anything in order to obtain or retain business, or to secure an improper advantage in the conduct of business. This includes any form of advantage, financial or otherwise, and encompasses anything of value. Particular care should be taken in interactions with any government-connected persons or entities as this is a heightened area of risk. Examples include but are not limited to: cash, gifts, services, job offers, loans, travel expenses, entertainment, and hospitality. We apply our ABAC principles, maintaining documentation to confirm legitimacy of intent, proportionality, transparency, and the absence of undue influence. We speak up and report any suspected activity, and allow transparent conversations to assess any situations that could be open to fraud, bribery, or corruption.

Our Principle

We support grants and donations that have a valid and legitimate purpose, in supporting Haleon's business interests. They must comply with applicable laws, regulations and codes of practice in the communities in which we operate. We do not make political contributions to any individual or organisation in any country in which we operate. Staff contributions to, and lawful activities of the Political Action Committee (PAC) established in the United States are unaffected by the principle of non-political contribution by the Group. Staff may attend, on behalf of the Group events arranged, sponsored and/or funded through the Political Action Committee (PAC).

Examples

→ Corporate memberships of non-trade organisations or of scientific societies, or those made for charitable events are permissible.

Why it matters

Our policy helps us to operate transparently and free from political ties, enabling us to focus on putting consumers first. Grants and donations are awarded in response to an unsolicited request, and the value of the grant or donation is in proportion to its purpose. There is also a risk that donations may be misused for bribery, or to support terrorism or violate sanctions obligations. Grants and donations are made transparently, and we retain the right to publicly disclose the recipient's name and the amount of the grant or donation. We also require the recipient to disclose our support.

What we expect

Anyone involved in this area has a responsibility to check whether any grants and donations made are in line with our expected standards. This includes confirming eligibility, completing a risk assessment, confirming proportionality, and identifying any potential conflict of interest. We refer to our country's 'Grants & Donations Committee' to receive necessary authorisation. We also require authorisation from the appropriate governing body.
